Women at War Week --Minute man talk. 12:10 P. M. December 5, 1942

Today is Saturday, December 5th, - the last week of the first year of the war, and the last day of our first Women at War Week.

We Americans are odd people--we like slogans, apt songs, catchy titles, and catch phrases that express ideas that we want to put over--short phrases that symbolize many things which we do not express.

We could almost write a short history of America that way.

"Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute," "Give me liberty, or give me death," "All men are created equal," "John Brown's body lies a-moldring in the grave, but his soul goes marching on," "Of the people, by the people, for the people," "Make the world safe for democracy," "Send us more Japs", "Sighted sub, sank same," "V for victory," "Praise the Lord, and pass the ammunition!"

But for this week--"Women at War Week", the slogan we want you to think about, and keep on thinking about, is "Top that ten percent."

Many who could do this, and do it easily, haven't yet done so. They should do it, and do it now.

Now, I know as well as you do that it is a financial impossibility for some of us to do that just yet. Pearl Harbor was thrust on us so suddenly that many of us have obligations that must be satisfied before we can "Top that ten percent." But it is up to each of us to buy as many stamps and bonds as we can as often as we can, and to plan to "Top that ten percent" as soon as possible.

The end of this week does not mean the end of the women's effort to sell stamps and bonds. This is only the beginning, folks! We have a stamp and bond booth which has been built in front of Daly's store, where anyone may buy stamps and bonds from now until the war is over.

Buy stamps and bonds for Christmas presents.

We can't "Praise the Lord, and pass the ammunition" unless we have the ammunition, -- and we can't have ammunition unless we pay for it. May it never again be said, as it was said at Bataan and Corregidor, that we had to quit because we ran out of quinine, and food, and ammunition.

We will not win this was until we all buy till it hurts.

Top that ten percent!!!!
